

Abstract

A method and system for managing devices via a database application programming interface. The system receives a request for a database operation, and maps the request to at least one command for a non-database operation. The system may execute the at least one command by making a system call via a device API, or by making a remote procedure call to a device.